

Focusing on the Breyne, a little-known Gdańsk naturalist family, the conference examines the practices of late-17th and early-18th century natural history in their transregional implementation. Approximately from 1670 to 1760, three generations of Breyne dedicated themselves to the study of nature.

Their papers were acquired for the ducal collections in Gotha at the end of the 18th century and survive in the Gotha Research Library. Although the various multifaceted documents were indexed in 1988, they have only been researched rudimentarily. The international and interdisciplinary conference brings together individual examinations about the Breyne family and embeds them in the larger context of early modern history of knowledge with the objective to establish a foundation for further systematic research.

The event is a cooperation between Leipzig University, the Centre of Science Studies of the Leopoldina with the support of fellow Prof. Dr. Kärin Nickelsen, and the Gotha Research Library.
